A split-time novel

Natassa seems to live a charmed life—blessed with a loving husband, a comfortable home, thriving children, and a loyal best friend. But when a single night shatters her perfect world, she is thrust into an emotional tempest.

In the 1800s, a young mulatto slave girl named Mercy faces the harrowing reality of separation from her mother. Cast into a world of unexplained cruelty and injustice, she uses a journal to grapple with her evolving understanding of race, identity, and belonging.
